Seven Candidates File For Offices, Election

The Blue Bell is in full flower.

Heard a story about a kid that was cussing all the time and his parents had quite a problem with him. They used every means they could think of to make him quit. One day the preacher was invited over to eat dinner and the preacher asked the boy what dish he wanted him to pass to him. The whole family was speechless when he said to the preacher "pass the damn potatoes". The father jumped up from the table, grabbed the kid by the scruff of the neck, took him to a back room and literally wore out the seat of his trousers, then took him back to the table to continue the meal. Once again the preacher asked the boy what he wanted him to pass to him. I don't know, the kid said, but one thing for sure, I don't want any of those damn potatoes.

Saw another one of those experiments in television. They are sort of creepy.

The 1968 Tappan Annual Report came out recently. Several pictures in it and we saw folks, all of whom have been here in Murray for some kind of meeting or something.

On page seven there was Bob Wyman, big as life. The years have been kind to him since he left Murray. Bob is president of the O'Keefe & Merritt Division of Tappan on the West Coast.

Here's Bob standing behind a gas pump.

40 Million Americans Find Health, New Joy By Just Going Walking

We don't expect your stroll will take you to such an unusual spot as this—but by just going for strolls in your area may prove an interesting, instructive adventure.

By GROVER BRINKMAN

Central Press Association Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Perhaps it was the Welsh-born hiker, Colin Fletcher, who started it all. Fletcher walked from one end of the Grand Canyon to the other, achieving national fame doing it. He also revived a "lost art," walking.

Today, more than 40 million Americans have a new-found joy in just walking. When this many of us walk for the sheer fun of stretching one's legs, there must be something universally good behind the idea in addition to its health benefits. There is.

Today walking seems to have caught on faster than the recent epidemic of Hong Kong flu. And let's not forget the joggers and cyclists.

Suddenly the open trail had a new meaning. The crest of the ridge, the high places, the seashore, the desert—the walkers were there. They not only have found a new face of America, they have gained as well a new peace of mind and relaxation that was a startling new experience.

Winter or summer, walkers insist, the trail is equally attractive. A raven soars overhead in a sky blue as indigo; a squirrel scampers across the path, a hickory nut clamped in its jaw. It is quiet. The solitude has its own pattern of relaxation. Perhaps the dedicated hiker can achieve this same feeling of exhilaration in the city. But if he does, he must labor harder at it. There are too many distractions, too much noise, even in the parks.

IF YOUR home is near any rugged open country, you can emulate John Muir by walking the many ridge trails. Each type of country has its own special enchantments for the walker. The walker observes nature in its many forms—a new flower, a wild strawberry growing from a claybank, the nest of a killdeer.

Any walker will soon be impressed by one thing: the clean earth. The America we found waiting for us in Columbus' day was a clean country, unspoiled as to tree and stream. Now man has dirtied it with his junk piles, air pollution, results of his greed. But the walker, working away from man's world, soon finds the cleanliness that was the original America.

Especially is this so in the desert, in the mountains, in the vast open places and public domain areas.

Walking is not only a health exercise, it is an education. "I find I am remembering a bluejay," one walker confided to me, "picking seeds from a sunflower head, then flying up to the nearest perch, holding the seed firmly with one foot, against the twig while it pecks out the inner kernel. You can't quite believe it, but you've just seen it, so it's fact."

Plainly, they had lost cold set about school.

As Dorwin Boorman, kinergarten teacher, and Cecil Matthews, first grade teacher, explain it, this "magic" was achieved by changing the additional standard for classroom behavior: that chilren remain quiet and orderly all times.

THERE WAS an atmosphere of informality, action and some horseplay.
Teachers occasionally would pick up their charges and toss them in the air. Instead of singing things, at other times they would throw them to the ground.

Other marks of the all-male kindergarten and first grade:
in readiness for language tests, the boys were introduced to typewriters.

PRACTICE at reading occurred in a teaching unit used inside a homemade race ship.

Typing recorders supplemented instruction in reading, math studies and science.
Practice in addition came keeping track of scores
a miniature bowling game.

Safeguard System Divides Armed Services Committee

By JOHN HALL

WASHINGTON UPI — The proposed Safeguard Antiballistic Missile ABM System is starting to fracture the normal unity of the powerful Senate Armed Services Committee.

Dissenting members are now talking privately about filing dissenting views against the ABM when the defense procurement bill is reported — a step virtually unprecedented on this most monolithic of congressional committees.

ABM foes say they can count at least four and possibly eight votes against the Safeguard on the 17-member panel not enough to defeat it but sufficient to justify a separate minority report.

Furthermore, some members claim the defenses extend beyond the ABM program, which is the focal point of congressional efforts to reduce the $80 billion defense budget. Other major weapons systems, such as the manned strategic bomber, are being severely scrutinized. Even the committee's guiding principle — that errors should be made on the side of national security — is for the first time being questioned.

Security 'Fetish'

In the past, the armed services panel could be counted on for solid support for defense spending requests. Minority reports were virtually unheard of, since the committee has made a fetish of presenting a unified view to Congress on national security matters.

The ABM issue has not exactly split the committee into two hostile camps. Some of its members, particularly junior senators and those with large military complexes to protect in their states, still have qualms about challenging the committee leadership openly.

To less experienced senators, it takes more than a little courage to look a four-star general in the eye, after he insists the national security is in danger, and tell him he is wrong.

But there are some early indications of turmoil.

Leadership Pressure

Democratic members, who felt dutiful to support former President Johnson's defense budget, now are receiving an opposite political pressure from the committee's new leaders — former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, Sen. Edmund Muskie, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy — who oppose the ABM and favor a negotiated arms control settlement with the Soviet Union.

Moreover, Sen. Stuart Sym-

FLIGHT FAILS

BERLIN UPI — A man tried to flee into West Berlin Wednesday night but fell short of his goal under a hail of gunfire from Communist East German guards.

West Berlin police spokesman said the man was trying to work his way through barbed wire fortifications when the Communist guards spotted him. The spokesman said about 50 shots were fired.

Communist guards carried the man back into East Berlin, said the spokesman. It was not known whether he had been killed.

THE GREATEST advantage in making your own clothes is addition to keeping within budget restrictions is choice — choice of smartly styled patterns, and of fabrics in all price ranges, solid colors and prints.

Three elements must be considered in choosing a pattern: you (what you like to look like; what you look and feel like; the occasion for which it is intended and the fit. Study yourself carefully. Then select a style to suit your type — one with uncluttered lines and easy to make. Be sure to check your measurements to determine the correct size. Always buy a pattern by the bust measurement. Less adjustment is needed that way.

If you are a beginner you'll need only the basic sewing tools at this point. You can later add the "extras" that will pleasantly help to expedite the task. No matter how simple the patterns, such as those shown here, use care and patience in marking and assembling the pieces.

If you would like to know the cost of these patterns and how to obtain them, send your inquiry and a self-addressed stamped envelope to me in care of this newspaper.

A New Twist That Features The Pretzel

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

USING up leftovers is not a trick exclusive to budget-stretching homemakers of the twentieth century. Way back in 610 A.D., for example, there lived a monk in Southern France who simply couldn't bear to waste bits of dough left from breadmaking. He finally twisted them into a form that somewhat resembled children's arms folded in prayer and gave them to well-behaved students as "pretiola," the Latin word for a little prize. Thus was the "pretzel" born and it has been enjoyed ever since as a savory snack with soda, beer or other beverages.

The new twist with pretzels calls for doing things to them and with them. For example: Make Piquant Pretzels spiced with Italian, French, Mexican or East Indian seasonings.

Dip into melted chocolate with pretzels for a sweet treat the young set will adore on.

Top off apple pie with crushed pretzels... used for crumb topping, they introduce a new and delicious flavor note. It seems a surprising combination... but not when you consider, for example, how good is an apple pie with a wedge of sharp cheese.

PIQUANT PRETZELS

1/2 cup melted butter or margarine
4 dozen pretzels
Garlic powder
Celery salt
Tarragon, finely crushed
Chili powder
Curry powder

Brush melted butter on both sides of pretzels.

For Italian pretzels, sprinkle 12 pretzels with garlic powder.

For French pretzels, sprinkle 12 pretzels with celery salt and tarragon.

For Mexican pretzels, sprinkle 12 pretzels with chili powder.

For East Indian pretzels, sprinkle 12 pretzels with curry

TAKE CURRY FROM INDIA, celery and tarragon from France, chili powder from Mexico and garlic powder from Italy. Sprinkle over buttery pretzels and bake. Serve warm!

Place pretzels in a single layer on a cookie sheet and bake in a 350 F. preheated oven for 10 minutes. Serve warm.

Makes 4 dozen pretzels.

CHOCOLATE COATED PRETZELS

2 (6 ounces each) packages semi-sweet chocolate pieces
1 tablespoon vegetable shortening
2 to 3 dozen assorted pretzels

Place chocolate in a pan over hot water. Stir until chocolate is melted. Add shortening and stir until smooth and melted. Drop pretzels into melted chocolate, one at a time. Turn pretzel in chocolate; then lift to allow excess chocolate to drain.

Place pretzels on wax paper or foil and chill to harden.

Some of the chocolate may be left in the pot, add pretzel nuggets or coarsely broken pieces of pretzel and drop mixture by spoonfuls on wax paper or foil to make pretzel clusters. Chill to harden.

Makes 2 to 3 dozen, depending on size of pretzels.

DUTCH PRETZEL APPLE PIE

1 package pie crust mix
2 (1 pound 9 ounces each) cans apple pie filling
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 cup finely crushed pretzels
1/2 cup firmly packed light brown sugar

1/4 cup butter or margarine
1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg

Prepare pie crust according to package directions.

Roll out and use to line the bottom and sides of an ungreased 10-inch pie pan fluting a high edge. Add lemon juice to pie filling and spoon into pan.

Combine remaining ingredients and cut in butter using 2 knives or a pastry blender until mixture is crumbly. Sprinkle crumbs around the outer edge of the pie.

Bake in a preheated oven (400 F.) for 35 to 40 minutes or until crust and topping are richly browned. Cool to lukewarm and then cut into wedges. Makes 1 (10-inch) pie.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE apple pie topped with pretzel crumbs? The pretzels lend a subtle tang that's perfect.

DIP RIGHT IN to melted chocolate for party pretzels, then let them chill until hard on wax paper or aluminum foil.

'68 Will Be Tough To Beat in Housing

By JAMES L. SRODES

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The housing industry spent most of last year congratulating itself on its recovery from the market collapse of 1966. Now it must try to beat those gains in 1969. The job will be a tough one.

Rising interest rates plus spiraling land, labor and lumber costs will plague the homebuilder in the year ahead, but government projections say he can still have the best 12 months he has ever had.

A Commerce Department survey of the construction industry paints an optimistic picture for the housing industry in 1969. Department economists caution, however, that the rosy view depends on how effectively the government can deal with its inflation problems in the first half of the year.

That's a big "if," but the economists point out that the industry has come a long way from the 845,000 housing start low point of 1966 to the 1.5 million rate it reached in 1968.

The survey also goes so far as to predict that the housing start rate for 1969 will reach 1.66 million units — a peak reached only in 1955 and topped only by the 1.9 million rate back in 1950 during the postwar housing boom.

Domestic Surge
The most dramatic surge in housing construction will be in the multi-unit dwelling, the survey said. Apartments, condominiums, duplexes and the like tallied a 36 per cent increase in starts last year, compared with the 8 per cent gain recorded for single family units.

"The estimated 610,000 units in multi-unit structures started in 1968 were the highest on record," the survey said.

"In 1969 a further rise is expected with starts in such structures reaching 685,000 — a 12 per cent uptrend."

This is not to say that the day of the one-family home is over, the department stressed. Not on your 8 per cent FHA mortgage.

"Although single unit starts have not shown the same momentum as multi-units in 1968, they should be at about the 975,000 unit mark in 1969," the survey stated.

While this represents an improvement over the estimated 915,000 units started in 1968, it falls short of the 1950 peak performance. It is, however, the highest since 1963, when 1,021,000 units were started.

All these predictions, the survey stressed, are based on the assumption that government policies will make mortgage money more available to builders and buyers alike.

"But while funds for housing will be somewhat more available to builders, little change in the high interest rates of 1968 is anticipated, at least through the first half of 1969, the survey cautioned.

(Release at will)

India has only 2.4 per cent of the world's land area but 14 per cent of the world's population.

must be nonprofit corporations or trusts organized under state laws.

While the co-op resident functions both as tenant and owner, the condominium dweller is more like a homeowner. He takes actual title of his residence in a multi-unit building or complex. The condominium owner alone is responsible for his mortgage and tax payments, and he also pays his proportionate share of operating expenses for shared areas, services and equipment such as hall, lobbies, elevators, heat and air-conditioning.

The co-op resident deducts income tax his proportionate share of interest and taxes paid by the corporation; the condominium owner deducts his personal mortgage interest and tax payments.

When it comes to selling, the resident of a government-aided co-op usually is required to sell his apartment back to the corporation at book value, while the private co-op owner can sell at the market price which would include a profit. However, the prospective private co-op buyer may have to meet the approval of the corporation's board of directors.

In most cases, to sell his unit, the condominium owner is required only to give the other owners the chance to buy at a price offered by a third party. As with a private home, the condominium owner, once a portion of his mortgage has been paid off, can raise cash through mortgage refinancing. This is not possible for the co-op resident who has no individual rights to the shared mortgage. But the cooperative dweller generally will pay less for his unit and he is not committed to individual mortgage.

Private co-ops may be profit or nonprofit operations. They may be built expressly for cooperative ownership or they may be created by rental tenants who, as a group, buy an apartment building.

In New York City, for instance, removal of rent controls from higher-priced apartments has resulted in an increasing number of apartment houses being converted to cooperatives.

Although the tenants are apt to pay slightly more in maintenance charges than they previously paid in rent, they benefit through tax deductions, a more stable occupancy and control over maintenance standards.

There also is protection against cost increases rising out of such factors as a small supply of available housing or, in the case of nonprofit co-ops, by profit consideration.

Any family considering either co-op or condominium ownership should realize that maintenance charges are a variable factor. Carrying charges will increase to reflect higher costs of materials, labor and services. Although costs can be controlled to some extent by varying the quality and quantity of maintenance and services, the desires and needs of an individual tenant may be outweighed by the majority vote.

Much of the advantage and success of co-op or condominium ownership, also, depends upon knowledgeable, efficient and conscientious management.

The prospective co-op or condominium buyer would be wise to study any property with an eye to such factors.

Some cooperatives afford greater tax deductions than others. If the corporation owns just the building, the buyer might pay less in a down payment but his maintenance charges may be higher to cover use of the land. And interest charges might be lower because only the building is mortgaged. Where both land and building are owned, a down payment may be larger, maintenance costs lower, and the tenant could have higher tax deductions for interest and amortization on the joint property.

In some cities there are cooperative housing developments sponsored by churches, universities and other organizations.

Advice on Co-ops And Condominiums

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS
NEW YORK (UPI) — Co-op or condominium?

It's a question being asked often these days as apartment rentals soar and single family housing takes increasingly large chunks of time and money to maintain.

Group ownership, combining at least some of the homeowner's financial benefits and the apartment dweller's freedom from maintenance worries is attracting a growing number of families.

Cooperative and condominium are the two forms of co-ownership and a good deal of confusion surrounds the terms. There are differences and a family would do well to investigate carefully to find which best suits its financial requirements.

The Foundation for Full Service Banks gives a rundown on each and suggests as a good source of information the local banker who is in a position to give information regarding property values and taxes as well as financial advice — the amount you can afford to invest in a co-op or how much mortgage you can swing for a condominium.

Generally speaking, most co-operatives and condominiums are managed similarly. Each member owner has a voice and a board of directors elected by the owners is in charge of the building management. Each owner is responsible for maintenance of his own dwelling.

In government-aided middle-income cooperatives or condominiums, the owner has one vote regardless of his investment or apartment size. The private co-op resident and condominium owner, however, have a vote proportionate to apartment investment and size.

Because one mortgage covers the entire cooperatively owned building and owners are not allowed individual mortgages, a co-op buyer makes a cash down payment on a unit and becomes a shareholder in the corporation or trust owning the property. He receives a lease to a specific dwelling and, instead of paying rent, he pays monthly maintenance or carrying charges. Mortgage costs, real estate taxes, cost of maintenance, repairs, replacements and administration of co-operatives are budgeted annually and divided among the tenants on a monthly basis according to their investments.

Private co-ops may be profit or nonprofit operations. They may be built expressly for cooperative ownership or they may be created by rental tenants who, as a group, buy an apartment building.

At Cape Keraudren Australia Plans Atom-Built Port; Some Opposition to Project Arises

Western Australia's Cape Keraudren.

By ARTHUR SHOLES

Central Press Association Correspondent

SYDNEY, Australia — The creation of the world's first atomic port at Cape Keraudren, Western Australia, in the remote northwest, now seems almost certain to take place in 1970.

The economic and technical studies being undertaken by the American and Australian experts are expected to be concluded in May. Five separate hydrogen bombs—each of 200 kiloton strength and each 10 times more powerful than the Hiroshima blast—will be exploded together to make huge caverns 800 feet below the sea-bed. The topsoil will then fall in, creating a great basin 400 feet deep and long enough and wide enough to handle the turnaround of 150,000-ton ore carriers, 1,000 feet long.

The charges, which will be placed in the 800-foot deep bore holes, will be different from normal hydrogen weapons. They will be specially constructed in long, thin cases to fit into the bore, and will probably each cost about $300,000 in Australian money.

The Keraudren Project marks another stage in the progress of the United States' Flowshare Program for civil engineering and mining applications of nuclear explosions. For Australia, the program promises a range of techniques which could be of great value in developing the country's natural resources.

THE GOVERNMENT of Western Australia sought the agreement of the federal government for a technical and economic feasibility study of the use of nuclear explosives for the development of the port at Cape Keraudren.

The approach was the result of representations made by the Seaford Mining Co., of the U.S., for the development of major iron ore resources near Nimgarra, about 40 miles from the coast.

The company, which bears the primary financial responsibility, has named Cape Keraudren, about 80 miles northeast of Port Hedland, as the proposed terminal of its railway and the location of port and loading facilities for ore export.

THE company's program requires an early decision on the construction of the harbor. Stockpiles, loading, and berthing facilities for large bulk ore carriers will be needed no later than the end of 1970. If nuclear explosives are to be used for the harbor, this operation must precede any other construction at the site.

The Australian government has agreed to participate in studying the economics and feasibility of the nuclear harbor plan in association with the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission.

However, a leading Australian biologist said here that the proposed detonation of five hydrogen bombs at Cape Keraudren "could be a terrible mistake."

"We still don't know the effects of underground nuclear explosions," declared Prof. L. C. Birch, University of Sydney School of Biological Science head.

"It would take years to carry out a survey at Cape Keraudren of plant and animal life. It seems to me to be complete nonsense not to get any information before going ahead with the explosion," Birch said.

DR. W. D. RIDE, director of the Western Australian Museum, said nuclear pollution of the sea in the area of the blast could lead to man's eating nuclear-contaminated food.

The radioactive product of the explosion was bound to be caught up in the food chains by the organisms that lived there, he said. Organisms that did not move around would be eaten by fish and these would be carried around.

"THIS SORT of thing would be serious if there were a large fishery in the area. As it stands, exploratory studies have been done on tuna resources," he said. "There is no Australian fishery, but there is an offshore Japanese fishery. Whether this would come close enough inshore to be important, I don't know."

If the Cape Keraudren project is successful by nuclear methods, it would open the way for the use of these methods in other fields — particularly civil engineering and mining.

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — A midsummer church music conference at Montreat, N.C., is being sponsored by the Presbyterian Church U.S. Board of Education.

The July 24-30 meeting will give choir directors, choir members, organists and ministers of churches of all sizes an opportunity to brush up on music skills under the guidance of internationally known musicians.

Veck has dubbed the race the Lady Godiva Stakes — what else?

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — The Southern Baptist Convention has decided after a three-year study that there is no sentiment or present for any change in the denomination's name.

Consider the many restraining factors; the market actually has been performing rather well as it adjusts to "much less speculative and instant performance-minded environment," Hayden Stone observes. There's a good chance, the firm says, that institutional money now being pulled out of conglomerate stocks will be switched in the near future into undervalued blue chips.

Bache & Co. feels the market probably will be under pressure through the rest of the week. However, the firm says, while the huge reservoir of institutional money remains on the sidelines, "selective bargain hunting may develop if the list moves much lower."

The market's lackluster performance last week can be attributed primarily to the three day trading week, E. F. Hutton & Co. says. This week should prove much more significant technically, the firm says, and will probably tell which way we may be going over the near term.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — From this point on, Shearson, Hammill & Co. says, developments in the peace talks will be the prime determinant of whether the market drifts down and eventually tests the early March lows. Investors continue to be quite sensitive to peace rumors, as they have been for nearly two years now, the firm says. Mutual funds are particularly sensitive. With liquidity of nearly 10 per cent they could be in a very embarrassing position "if some bullish development such as peace talks came along suddenly."

Pet Problems They Tend To Be Somewhat Exotic

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

"It's a squirrel monkey," said the man in the dime store -pet shop department. "He's tame and affectionate—a perfect pet."

So my friend bought him—not only because of the sales pitch but because of the children who were sticking their fingers through "McMonk's" cage. A true animal lover, she couldn't bear to see the cute little creature teased.

McMonk, while beguiling and lovable, was far from the perfect pet. The average monkey, as many have discovered, cannot be housebroken. What's more, McMonk was a juvenile delinquent. He swung off the cornice, hung from the shower rod, shredded the draperies and finally wore out his welcome one morning when he not only sipped her husband's breakfast coffee but made off with his Dahlia.

"He has to go" was her husband's ultimatum—but where? A home was finally found after countless phone calls including two to local zoos that reported "a monkey housing shortage." McMonk wasn't the only of his species to flunk out as a house pet.

This, as zoo and A.S.P.C.A. spokesmen are quick to tell you, is the usual story with "exotic" pets and, sad to say, they are more popular now than ever before because a rare pet is a status symbol.

Why buy junior a dog or a cat when a South American horned lizard, an iguana or an equatorial barbet is a real conversation piece.

It is not all the fault of the public, says William G. Conway, General Director of the New York Zoological Society.

In the case of the exotic pet, he points out, the purchaser isn't always aware of the problems of care. Most of these rare species require highly specialized attention, complex diet, special conditions of warmth or humidity, shelter and space. Some are so sensitive, notes Mr. Conway, that they must have seclusion. Others require company of their own kind. This frequently results in multiplication and more problems.

Tax Shelters Are Difficult To Discover

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON UPI — As April 15 closes in, many Form 1040 victims are grumbling about the situation that enabled a number of millionaires to avoid paying any income taxes last year.

Some less affluent taxpayers have demanded that Congress close the tax shelters in which the millionaires found protection.

Others have demanded that Congress expand the shelters so that they won't have to pay any taxes either.

Since tax legislation originates in the House Committee on Ways and Means and Loopholes, I contacted a staff expert to get his views on the matter.

Isn't Easy

"You've got to realize that it isn't easy to disclose a millionaire from a tax shelter once he is well dug in," he said. "The big problem is finding the shelter in the first place."

"They can't be seen from the air, so aerial reconnaissance is useless. Some of them are so artfully camouflaged you could walk right by them and never know they were there."

"Our research laboratory has developed some new equipment, such as infra-red sensory devices, to help us locate hidden tax shelters. Once we get a shelter pinpointed, the standard technique is to uncover the entrance and drop in a tear gas bomb to flush the millionaires out."

"But often we find that by the time we zero in on a shelter, the millionaires will have already vacated it and moved on to another shelter."

"The income tax law runs to 930 pages, with an additional 17,000 pages of court interpretations and Internal Revenue Service IRS regulations. This vast legal thicket is honeycombed with shelters."

"Most of the shelters are spacious and well stocked with provisions. A millionaire who holes up in a tax shelter can survive almost indefinitely."

I said, "Well, what are the prospects of constructing a nationwide system of public shelters so that all citizens will have tax protection?"

"The cost would be prohibitive," he said. "It would be impossible to provide shelters for the entire population without raising taxes. Which would make the program self-defeating."

"Then what would you recommend?"

"I think the best plan might be to create a federal Tax Defense Agency that would supply free blueprints to citizens interested in building their own tax shelters."

"Individual shelters can be erected with minimal expense. They won't provide complete protection, but they will usually withstand anything except a direct hit by an IRS auditor."

BACK IN POLITICS in New York is former Mayor Robert E. Wagner, trying for his old City Hall job.

Fins 'n Feathers

by LEE SMITH

Hi! It's time to shatter this serenity and calm for a moment. For this action junior is the right weapon. A year of exile, loss of people contact, etc., leaves us flopping around like a fish out of water, wondering how to begin.

There is some important business on the agenda, however we always mix a little nonsense, a lot of gab and just pure fun into all important business. "Crepe hanging" never helped anything, so relax and visit a moment.

Thank you for the inquiries, the roses and every courtesy during our absence. It would be less than honest if we didn't admit to being flattered and immensely pleased (even more surprised) to discover a few of you remember and miss our feeble efforts. Be assured that we miss you and the big hounds far more than you miss us! Before we get too sticky let's just say THANK YOU, sincerely.

Would you believe fishermen are swarming like bees? Our unofficial reports indicate the past four days have been unusually productive for most fishermen. Evidently all fish are waking up as most people mention several different types of fish taken during each trip.

Attention Cooners: The Twin Lakes Coonhunters Club will sponsor a Buddy Hunt Saturday night, April 19th. There will be six trophies given. Two trophies to the pair for the winners of 1st, 2nd and 3rd place. Come early and get your dogs registered. Entry closes at 7 p.m. with the hunt beginning immediately. The club issues a special invitation to all cooners to get your buddy and favorite hounds and join your friends for some clean fun and good fellowship. You are aware of the fact that buddy hunts are our particular favorite. Join us at the Twin Lakes club Saturday night, April 19.

Sunday afternoon, April 20th, the Twin Lakes club is sponsoring three events. Starting at 12:30 p.m. a "drag" race with 3 junior and 3 senior trophies given to the winners.

A treeing contest follows immediately with one junior and one senior trophy given. Immediately following the treeing contest a swim contest will be sponsored. Three junior and three senior trophies will be presented.

Please observe the starting time. On previous occasions a number of people arrived as early as 9:00 a.m. Starting time is 12:30 p.m. Food, soft drinks and coffee will be available at the snack bar. We invite you to attend and enjoy an afternoon of fun with friends and the "big hounds". Incidentally they have a really big deal cooking for the latter part of May. Ted Atkins says plans aren't completed yet and I can't mention it. O.K., Ted, I wouldn't dream of mentioning a fish supper, prizes or any such things. Better duck boys, that'll be hot lead a flyin'. I'm just getting even with you for selling "Big Mike". Ted and Gary have a pen full of big coon hounds and not one that I remember.

Just wait till I see Neal York. Would you believe he has sold Mike? That hound brought home more trophies than you could shake a bobcat at. Norma and the youngsters still have the beautiful Piott "Ranger". Wouldn't it be a disgrace if Ranger brought home the bacon (or trophies) after all the male sounds Neal used to make. Sounds like that dog won't be worth killing, petted to death, etc., etc. Boy, you're picked on because it's early in the morning and well... it just seems like the natural thing to do.

Wonder if Dale Garland still has Little John and Big John. Remember the problem we had keeping the Redick and Walker quarters in the proper order.

Joe Pat Jones, do you still have the Mighty Champ? After two years I'm afraid to attend this hunt. If we see any of the hounds we know it's a sure bet they'll be with the wrong owners. More ammunition for the conflict.

Attempted to talk to Martin Oil's Bill Mohundro, with not much luck. You couldn't hog tie him and keep him long enough to get any information. He hasn't been working the hounds lately. He is occupied with building a new home, working at Martin Oil and farming. Wonder why the Indian doesn't get a part time job? It's a shame to be so lazy. One big point in his favor though, he still owns the 3 black 'n' tans, Jim, Moose and Blackie. That is the important issue.

Bud Kilgore and Doc Arnett were working the hounds Saturday night. Reports are they had a good run. It is the "running season" in Tennessee, you know! Remembering these fellows and the other good sportsmen brings a note of sadness as we think of Hill Gardner. Without doubt, he was one of the finest gentlemen and truly great sportsmen we have ever met. We miss him very much.

Temptation finally won and we strolled over to McNutt's Body Shop (muddy overalls 'n' all) to see the big hounds. Didn't have time to get names or information on them but we can say Buddy has three of the finest looking black 'n' tans we've seen in a spell.

He had a trading hound also, but I didn't even know what breed. All eyes were on the black 'n' tans. Only one beef with Buddy... he knows and owns some fine hounds, but he won't keep one long enough for us to get acquainted with it. Really we must talk to this boy's head.

Larry Lockhart took papa Euel Franklin on a fishing trip over the weekend. They brought home a nice string each trip. Larry is much of a fisherman. Probably giving 'ole dad' lessons in the art of fishing. That'll do it! Ray Satory from St. Louis spent the weekend with his nephew Melvin Smith. They were fishing Saturday night and Sunday night. Their stringer boasted the best catch we've heard of this year. And where do you guess they got their bait? Naturally! Mr. Smith operates the Pure Oil Station at 4th and Chestnut. Like most fishermen these gentlemen had a "duke's mixture" of bass, croppie and catfish.

With the warmer weather, the water up and all other fishing conditions favorable it looks like a "field day".

Don't forget the big buddy hunt at Twin Lakes Coonhunters Club, Saturday night, April 19th, at 7:00 p.m. This should bring us out of exile. It's been fun visiting with you. It's back to the west 40. The broad ax fits this hand better than a pen and isn't half as dangerous. As for the sledge hammer... John Henry would turn green.

Gravity Has Effect On Face Muscles

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON UPI — The next time you encounter an old three-toed sloth, take a good look at his face.

He may be showing his age in other ways, but you will note that he has very few wrinkles. Or at least not as many as you have. The reason is that sloths spend most of their time hanging upside down from tree limbs. This means that their faces are not subjected to the pull of gravity in the same way yours is.

And gravity is what causes your eyes to bag, your jowls to sag and other droopy things to happen to your face as you grow older.

Eventually Collapses

For a time, facial muscles can resist the steady tug of gravity. But eventually the whole thing collapses.

The effect of gravity on the face was discussed this week by some plastic surgeons attending a "youth and beauty" seminar in Philadelphia.

"Maybe if we'd walk around on our hands all our lives, some of it could be avoided," one of them was quoted as saying.

From a layman's view, the concept of walking on your hands to avoid facial slippage appears somewhat illogical.

This would not eliminate gravitational pull; it would only cause your face to sag in a different direction. If we walked on our hands, our faces would sag toward the tops of our heads, ward the tops of our heads.

In other words, we would have bags above, rather than below, the eyes, and our dewlaps would be festooning our cheeks instead of cascading down our necks.

Sensible Approach

The three-toed sloth technique seems a more sensible approach. Unlike hand-walkers, who keep their heads pointed straight down, the sloth keeps his head on a horizontal plane, face upward. Thus the face sags laterally, instead of vertically.

In that position, gravity pulls the skin tightly against the facial bones, smoothing out wrinkles. The nape of your neck may begin to sag rather badly, but that is a small price to pay for ununruffled faces.

It is, I'll concede, difficult to walk with your head held horizontally, face skyward. But no more difficult than walking on your hands.

The alternate - hanging upside-down from tree limbs - becomes a bit of a drag after awhile, although sloths seem to enjoy it.

As a last resort, of course, you can go to a plastic surgeon and have your face lifted, an operation known as a "sag transplant."

He will take the slack out of your face and leave you with a sagging bank balance.

Brainy Trio

VETERAN, Wyo. (UPI) — With a population of 40, Veteran, a southeastern Wyoming town, doesn't have much chance to get on the map.

That is, except when three of the 40 students at the State University and all three turn in straight "A" averages for a semester to earn berths on the president's honor roll, the highest academic recognition.

Contented Kegler

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Virgil Mest has been bowling for years and, at age 68, wasn't dissatisfied with his 167-average. The other day, Mest bowled a 300-perfect game.

AND HERE is where a lot of the Cottonwood's overflow is now, ruining homes west of city.

Key Clue

ELIZABETHTOWN, Ky. (UPI) — If the key fits, that WAS your car.

Answering a report of a striped automobile, Kentucky state trooper James G. Veluzat found the remaining pieces scattered over a 10-acre field.

From a taillight lens, Veluzat established that the car had been a 1969 red Mustang. Looking further, the trooper found the trunk lock and took it to the owner of a red Mustang reported stolen. The key fit and the car's identity was established. The thief, however, remained at large.

Simon Pure Research

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — These air pollution research scientists practice what they teach.

Albert Hulstunk of the State University at Albany's Atmospheric Sciences Center says, one of the 45 researchers smokes cigarettes.

Vanishing Victim

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — Because of hunters seeking their valuable furs, there are only about 15,000 vicuñas - small, woolly animals similar to llamas - in Peru according to the Ministry of Agriculture.

Girls vs. Teachers

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — Schoolgirls shouldn't be told that the best way to get rid of an annoying male teacher is to trap him into a compromising situation and then yell. Not on television, anyway, says the Danish Union of Teachers.

The union filed a protest to the state-owned radio and television against a program advocating such action.

"We have enough trouble without this sort of advice to the girls," it said.
